DINO-MITE FIND IN RATON'S CLIMAX CANYON BY LOCAL SCOUT TROOP.

On a day exploring the well known grounds of Climax Canyon, Robert Wick and his dad, Bob Wick, stumbled upon an artifact from the past. According to Jared Chaterley, "Robert brought the find to the attention of the troop at one of our meetings and ultimately suggested that we excavate it as a troop and donate it to the Raton Museum for display".

Last fall the troop traveled up with shovels, picks and a stretcher and after about an hour of digging and prying, they managed to remove the sandstone that the print was in. The troop victorious, then hauled the large stone to their truck. The next day, arrangements were made with the Raton Museum where the artifact was donated. It is currently on display.

On June 11th, Robert and the rest of Troop 91 were given the YOU ROCK award for their efforts in coordinating the dinosaur print donation.
